HILL International

Hill International's Executive Disaster Advisory Services provides tailored guidance for elected officials, including governors and mayors, who are tasked with leading communities through the complex phases of disaster recovery. Pre-disaster, the service offers strategic planning and risk assessment, helping leaders understand potential vulnerabilities and craft mitigation strategies. Officials are equipped with the knowledge to build resilience into their jurisdictions, ensuring they are better prepared to access federal programs and emergency resources when disasters strike.

In the aftermath of a disaster, Executive Disaster Advisory Services steps in to provide expert navigation of the federal disaster recovery landscape, including FEMA, HUD, and other vital programs. From securing funding to coordinating with federal agencies, this service ensures that elected officials can streamline recovery efforts, minimizing delays, and maximizing available resources. This high-level support enables leaders to make informed decisions quickly, maintaining public confidence and driving efficient, effective recovery for their communities.
